

Further Readings on Behavioral Economics

Peter P. Wakker

March, 2023

Here are further general readings on behavioral economics. Angner (2012), Cartwright (2018), Earl (2022), Tomer (2017), and Wilkinson (2007) are textbooks. The two Bernheim et al. volumes are collections of papers. Moscati (2019) is on history, Page (2021) on normative status, and Wilkinson (2007) on socio-academic animosities between some experimental economists and some behavioral economists.

Angner, Erik (2012) “Course in Behavioral Economics.” Palgrave, the MacMillan Press, London.

Barberis, Nicholas C. (2018) “Richard Thaler and the Rise of Behavioral Economics,” Scandinavian Journal of Economics 120, 661–684.

Bernheim, B. Douglas, Stefano DellaVigna, & David Laibson (2018) “Handbook of Behavioral Economics; Volume 1.” Elsevier, Amsterdam.

Bernheim, B. Douglas, Stefano DellaVigna, & David Laibson (2019) “Handbook of Behavioral Economics; Volume 2.” Elsevier, Amsterdam.

Cartwright, Edward (2018) “Behavioral Economics,” (3rd ed.). Routledge, London.

Earl, Peter E. (2018) “Richard H. Thaler: A Nobel Prize for Behavioural Economics,” Review of Political Economy 30, 107–125.

Earl, Peter E. (2022) “Principles of Behavioral Economics.” Cambridge University Press, London.

Moscati, Ivan (2019) “Measuring Utility: From the Marginal Revolution to Behavioral Economics.” Oxford University Press, Oxford, UK.

Page, Lionel (2021) “Optimally Irrational: The Good Reasons We Behave the Way We Do.” Academic Press, New York.

Svorenčík, Andrej (2016) “The Sidney Siegel Tradition: The Divergence of Behavioral and Experimental Economics at the End of the 1980s,” History of Political Economy 48, 270–294.

Tomer, John F. (2017) “Advanced Introduction to Behavioral Economics.” Edward Elgar Publishing, Vermont.

Wilkinson, Nick (2007) “An Introduction to Behavioral Economics A Guide for Students.” Palgrave, The MacMillan Press, London. 3rd edition due in 2023.